Mr Daniel Del Re
Head of International Communications
China Renaissance

Daniel Del Re has over 10 years of experience advising public and private firms on communications strategies to strengthen and sustain their brand, corporate valuation and ability to attract and retain investors and clients. He currently serves as the head of international communications for the investment firm China Renaissance. He previously worked for Kekst, a New York-based specialty communications agency, and FTI Consulting's Strategic Communications practice.

Daniel has planned and managed a variety of communications activities to support capital raisings (IPOs, bond offerings), mergers and acquisitions, and business launches alongside ongoing media and investor relations programs. In addition, he has helped clients navigate crises such as business line divestitures, executive transitions, government investigations, merger disputes, litigation, and cyber/network breaches, among other acute circumstances.

Daniel has worked in New York and Hong Kong as a communications consultant to clients across a range of industries including finance, real estate, telecommunications, retail, law, and chemicals.

Before becoming a consultant, Daniel worked as a journalist covering business and financial markets. He covered equity markets, economic indicators, regulation, mergers and acquisitions, and corporate governance, among other topics.

He earned a master's degree in journalism and a certificate in portfolio management from New York University.
