Hong Kong in a Warming World 全球變暖下的香港

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) released the Special Report on Global Warming of 1.5°C in October 2018, making an urgent call for policymakers that limiting global warming to 1.5°C would require rapid, far-reaching and unprecedented changes in all aspects of society. Yet, President Trump of the United States keeps on Tweeting messages casting doubts on the reality of global warming. Is IPCC alarmist? Is the climate changing?

The Hong Kong Observatory will deliver a talk titled "Hong Kong in a Warming World" and cover the scientific basis of climate change, debunking some climate myths and calling for actions in the aspects of mitigation, adaptation and resilience to combat climate change.

Speaker's Profile

SHAM Fu-cheung, Chief Experimental Officer, Hong Kong Observatory 香港天文台 總學術主任 岑富祥先生

Mr SHAM Fu-cheung, Chief Experimental Officer of the Hong Kong Observatory, is working in the Climate Forecast Services and Climate Change Studies. Mr SHAM actively supports the policies and actions on combating climate change and promotes public awareness on climate change.
